The umbrella plant is a sedge plant and must have moisture, but it may be grown to fine proportions in a moist corner of the garden. Propagate by taking the umbrella-like tops and leaving about an inch of stem to them. When done blooming, sink in water, wet sand or wet earth. The roots may be divided to good advantage.

HIGH SCHOOL SQUAD MAY PLAY CONTESTS ONLY IN DRY TOWNS

Supt. Buell Makes Drastic Ruling, Which Prohibits Team From Playing Games in "Wet" Cities.

The Janesville high school 1914 football eleven may play games this season only in "dry" towns. Announcement of this drastic ruling was made this morning by H. C. Buell, who was given full power to act in the matter by the board of education.

"There will be no possible chance for the thirty youths who follow the team, whether they be high school students or outsiders, to secure their favorite drinks at the fall football trips, made by the high school eleven," stated Supt. Buell today. "The team will play only in 'dry' towns when on their trips, while on the other hand, games at home may be played with teams coming from 'wet' towns."

At the home games we can handle the men much better, but it is enough to watch the team on trips without taking care of the hangers-on that are bound to follow along. My mind has not changed since last spring, at which time I stated that the 1915 basketball five could not and would not participate at the Rock County tournament. We have never been able to take care of anyone but the athletics in the past, and for the benefit of protecting them from any injustice, and to protect the team from further disgracing themselves, I have made up my mind to keep the towns out of 'wet' towns entirely. Letters asking for games have been sent to Stoughton, Evans, Rockford and Freeport, all 'dry' towns, and also to Northwestern Military Academy, at Lake Geneva, where a five mile liquor zone is being enforced."

"Mr. Buell further stated that the basketball five this winter would in all probabilities participate in the Milton College tournament to fill the vacancy in the schedule, in March. The Beloit high school team will come to this city this fall for a gridiron struggle, as will other teams from 'wet' towns. The schedule when complete will be an easy one, and Supt. Buell looked for the clearest season of athletics ever experienced at the high school. As prospects for a winning team are bright, students in general look with favor on the playing schedule."

AGED MAN OVERCOME BY GAS PASSES AWAY

James McArthur, Overcome on Sunday, Expires Shortly Before Twelve Last Night.

The demise of James McArthur, the aged resident who was overcome by gas on Sunday evening at the home of his daughter, Mrs. L. L. Nickerson, 100 Madison street, occurred shortly before twelve o'clock last night. The patient had been in a critical condition since Sunday evening at six o'clock, when Mr. and Mrs. Nickerson called home to find the elderly man with tubes, and the aged man unconscious in his room.

Mr. McArthur was born in 1833 in Racine, Wisconsin, and came to this country in 1849, settling in Johnstown, Wisconsin. He remained a resident of that place until 21 years ago, when he came to this city. He leaves one daughter, Mrs. L. L. Nickerson of this city, and three brothers, Duncan and John of Emerald Grove, and Arthur of Janesville.

Funeral services will be held at the home of Mrs. Nickerson, 810 Milton avenue, Thursday afternoon, at one-thirty, Rev. George E. Parise officiating. Interment will take place at Johnstown Center.

TWO AUTOS COLLIDE AT FIVE POINTS CROSSING

Touring automobiles owned by T. E. Welch and Norman Carle collided on Milwaukee street on the south end of the five points railroad crossing yesterday afternoon shortly after three o'clock. The machines coming in opposite directions, came together in front of a projecting shed which obscures the view of the street. Only minor damage was caused by the accident.

Watchmen at the five points crossing report that auto drivers have disregarded safety in crossing the tracks at this dangerous point, running around the gates when down. While the accident yesterday afternoon was not caused by this offense, several cars have come near colliding at this spot within the last week. Prosecution threatened by the railroad authorities in case drivers continue to run around the gates.

Dinner Stories

"Well, did them moving picture people get pictures of everything on the Everything but the hired man. They couldn't catch him in motion."

A city man who owing to a bust-

ness deal was obliged to live for some time in a small railroad town frequently felt in need of excitement. Once, when he was really depressed with the monotony of his life, he saw a wildly excited crowd gathered on a vacant lot. Prominent citizens were there, cheering and shouting, and he felt that the unexpected had happened and something was doing. He rushed to the lot and gasped out: "What's the matter?" "Matter?" shouted a rampant citizen. "Matter? Why, we are going to have a swarm of bees."

A well-known French actor became involved in a discussion with an American, grew heated, drew his card from his pocket, threw it on the table with a tragic air, and stalked out. The American regarded the card for some moments then took out his fountain pen, wrote "admit defeat" above the engraved line, and went off to the theater.

LATE REPORTS SHOW GREAT RAIN DAMAGE

Vicinity of Janesville Shows Great Destruction—Railroad Still Tied Up.

Protracted reports of Monday's storm still continue to come in. Throughout the county in general huge losses have been suffered as a result of the heaviest rainfall seen in this community in many years. To the west in Green county perhaps as much damage was done in this vicinity. Cattle were killed by lightning, and drowned in the swollen streams. Railroad traffic still stands demoralized condition this morning on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul division west of here.

The morning passenger train from the west was made up at Badrean as track conditions west of there did not permit the running of trains. Returning, the passenger was compelled to remain over at that place.

The railroad bridge below the Fourth avenue dam has been anchored against its going out with the rush of the waters. A string of freight cars has been placed on the structure. Expectations last evening were that track conditions were safe to permit the passenger train due west from Janesville at 7:10 p. m. to make the trip. Railroad officials announced the running of the train and it was not until three minutes before leaving that that reports of additional washouts reached here causing the abandoning of the train. The trouble was at New Glarus, a place where throughout the day no danger was expected.

Just west of Brodhead a bad washout occurred, the waters in a distance of 10 rods, overran the track and at one end twisted the rails and ties to a position 50 feet over the fence at the right of the line. The track was twisted directly to the left. After the waters receded the section of track was lying almost at right angles to its former position, superintendant of the Mineral Point division arrived here last evening and this morning left on a work train to go over the division.

To add to St. Paul railroad men's burdens, the engine on the passenger train from Chicago, due from here at 7:03 for Madison, broke down near Fox Lake, Ill., delaying this and other trains nearly two days.

The deep gully made by the waters at Stoughton has been filled and the St. Paul is now able to run its trains through to Madison.

County Highway Commissioner C. E. Moore reports washouts on the upper Footville road and on the middle road in the town of Center. Near the Kennedy farm on the river road in the town of Janesville there is another bad washout.

The deluge of water which swelled the Yahara river nearly took out the Stoughton power plant at that place. When the call for help came Superintendent Clark Oshfeld of Stoughton quickly collected a gang of men and hurried to the scene of trouble at midnight. The spillways were becoming clogged and for a while the outlook was threatening. By rapid work, however, the debris was removed and the dam saved. In Stoughton the dam on the Yahara was threatened when bogs from marshes in the Madison lakes, floating down by the high water, accumulated. Gangs of men were called in the dead of night and the trouble eliminated.

At 1 o'clock yesterday noon the river at Deloit was four feet higher than at the crossing. By rapid work, however, the debris was removed and the dam saved. In Stoughton the dam on the Yahara was threatened when bogs from marshes in the Madison lakes, floating down by the high water, accumulated. Gangs of men were called in the dead of night and the trouble eliminated.

The river here remained normal today since early morning. At that time the water was two feet and three inches above the government mark. No change had been noticed up to 2 o'clock this afternoon the fall having occurred during the night.

Appetite Follows Good Digestion

Nearly everyone indulges their appetite and the digestive organs are abused, resulting in a congestion of poisonous waste that clogs the bowels and causes much misery and distress.

The most effective remedy to correct this condition is the combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This is a natural, pleasant-tasting remedy, gentle yet positive in action, and quickly relieves indigestion, constipation, sick headache, belching, etc. Drug stores sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, and in thousands of homes it is the indispensable family remedy. AMUSEMENTS

AT MYERS THEATRE

Sarah Padden, always a favorite in Janesville, returns to the Myers Theatre tonight presenting a new play of modern life with the leading title, "The Little Shepherd of Bargain Row." Howard McKent Barnes is the author. Originally Mr. Barnes wrote comedy to scenes of compelling dramatic force. Those who recall Miss Padden's splendid work in "Kindling" will find new delight in her virile vigorous creation of Mr. Barnes' character.

The United Play Co. has supplied a complete and artistic scenic production and has surrounded the star with the largest and best company she has had. There are nearly a score of parts all played, it is said, with unusual skill.

Among the offerings of the new season none is more promising than "The Little Shepherd of Bargain Row."

Myers Vaudeville.

Friday matinee marks the opening date of the vaudeville season at Myers Theatre. Manager Myers has arranged with the booking agency for only the best grade of attractions. The first offering will be Miss Francis Le Maire in a phenomenal Roller Skating and Unicycle novelty act. Knight and Berson will be presented as novelty entertainers. Carroll, Keating and Fay will appear in a singing, talking sketch entitled "At Crow's Nest Inn."

At the Apollo.

"Flames of Justice."

One of the most gripping and sensational dramas ever put on the screen is the "Flames of Justice" which is being presented in five parts today at the Apollo, featuring the most famous star of both hemispheres, Miss Julia DeKelay.

"Little Rebel" Draws Crowds.

At two matinees and two evening performances yesterday "The Little Rebel" drew crowded houses, rewarding this wonderful picture with rounds of applause. Over two hundred children attended the Little Virginia matinee and John Smith of 205 Jefferson Ave., received the $5 in gold.

Vaudeville Thursday.

The Apollo vaudeville for the end of the week includes three double acts which have been favored with glowing press notices in other cities. The Todd-Nards are equilibrists of unusual ability. Pryor and Addison furnish a singing, talking and comedy act while Bingham and Gable offer a very novel musical act.

RAIL WASHOUT PREVENTS ARRANGING OF HILDEN

Because of the washout on the St. Paul line, Peter Hilden was unable to reach Janesville to appear before the Municipal Judge Maxfield to answer the charge of obtaining money under false pretences as charged by the state. Hilden was released Monday under bail and phoned to the court authorities that it was impossible to make railroad connections. His case was adjourned until the rail line is repaired.

Sketch for Elita Proctor Otis under the title of "The Jewelry Buyer." Later Miss Otis entered the cast of "Potash and Perlmutter" for a long New York engagement and the sketch was withdrawn from vaudeville. Its success in the varieties pointed the way to amplification and a threat of drama of real worth is the result. The role of Nora Blake offers opportunity for Miss Padden which she has not enjoyed since the days of Annie Jeffries in "The Third Degree." It is a big acting part, running the gamut of human emotions from irresistible to scenes of compelling dramatic force. Those who recall Miss Padden's splendid work in "Kindling" will find new delight in her virile vigorous creation of Mr. Barnes' character.

BOSTON GAINS A LAP WHILE GIANTS LOSE

Pitcher James Allows Fifteen Hits and Wins From Dodgers. Alexander is Winner Over Fromme.

There is a bigger difference in percentage between the Braves and Giants today than yesterday. Hopeful fans, who have wished all along that their Boston favorites would win the pennant, may rest assured that unless some real bluck faces the former Doves, they will rally with the 1914 flag, for the first time in many a year. They will tend to create still more the superstition that one team cannot win the flag more than three times in a row.

Watching the Giant scoreboard yesterday, the Braves took every opportunity to swat the pill when it was necessary, and even though James allowed fifteen hits, he won his game 7 to 5, against the Brooklyn Dodgers. After Stallings' men had played championship ball, by winning this battle, and by the Giants, with Fromme hurrying against Alexander of the Phillies at the latter's town, losing 4 to 2, the Bostonians are now in the lead over their bulldog rivals, by three and one-half games.

The Cubs and Cardinals did not play yesterday, as their conflict was not scheduled. Today we find the Cubs at Brooklyn, where they will commence to close their last eastern invasion of the year. St. Louis will play at Boston, while the Cincinnati Reds go to the Polo Grounds to tackle the Giants. It looks as though the Braves and Giants would win in their respective present series, and it is up to the Cubs to beat Brooklyn, and pass the Cardinals in the race. Boston has 24 games yet to play, while New York has one less.

REPLENISHING GAME PRESERVE AT MINOQUA

State game wardens will place thirty deer or deer fawns in the state game preserve situated fifteen miles north of Minoqua, on Saturday, the deer having been shipped to Minoqua recently.

The state has set aside 320 acres of land, which is thoroughly fenced, where all kinds of wild game is afforded protection. Fifty head of elk are expected to be placed on the farm in the near future. Many Rocky mountain women hunt in this vicinity during the open season.

GRIDIRON PROSPECTS BRIGHT AT NEBRASKA

Veterans Back for This Year's Eleven. Michigan Aggies Hardest Game on Schedule.

Lincoln, Neb. Sept. 16.—Five or perhaps seven veterans of the undefeated University of Nebraska eleven of 1913 will answer the first practice call on Sept. 30, and Coach Stiehm has an excellent list of last year's freshmen from which to pick the balance of the eleven.

Captain Halligan, a star tackle; Cameron, another tackle; Rutherford, halfback; Howard, fullback; and Abbott, guard, are the men upon whom Stiehm is certain he can rely. Bellis, a 1913 tackle, and Mastin, an end, are expected to return to school this year.

Dove, a halfback; Caley and Amack, ends; Carey and Harris, tackles, and Shields, a guard, are the most promising of the new men. Stiehm's hardest task will be to develop a speedy backfield. The Cornhuskers' schedule this year is a disappointment to Nebraska rooters who hoped to see Nebraska extend the circle of her gridiron activities. The University of Iowa is the only one of the western conference schools on the list. The athletic authorities were unable to agree with the University of Minnesota on dates for the year and the Minnesota contest, looked forward to as a feature of the Nebraska program, was shelved.

While the dicker with the Gophers was on, the Cornhuskers lost the opportunity to grasp the only vacant date on Notre Dame's schedule, another keen disappointment.

The Michigan Aggie, another team that proved a 1913 surprise by trouncing the western conference schools, will come to Lincoln Oct. 24 for what is expected to be the stiffest battle on the Cornhuskers' schedule. The schedule complete follows:

Schedule
Oct. 10—South Dakota at Lincoln.
Oct. 17—Kansas Aggies at Manhattan, Kansas.
Oct. 24—Michigan Aggies at Lincoln.
Oct. 31—Ames at Lincoln.
Nov. 7—Monmouth at Lincoln.
Nov. 14—Kansas at Lincoln.
Nov. 21—Iowa at Iowa City.

FERRY TO HAVANA BENEFITS SHIPPING

Key West, Fla., Sept. 16.—Shippers all over the country are expected to be benefited when the new car ferry to Havana, the largest of its kind ever constructed, is completed and put into operation soon.

A steel vessel, 350 feet long, the new ferry will carry thirty loaded freight cars to Havana, a distance of 96 miles, in eight hours. It will be possible for a factory in Chicago to ship a carload of goods to Havana without once breaking the car seal and enable Chicago shippers to make direct delivery in Havana.

Other cities will make similar gains in time of shipment.

WOODWORTH COACHES HIGH SCHOOL SQUAD

Marquette University Star, for Three Years Fills Shoes of Curtis for One Night.

Rather to practice without a coach than not to practice at all, the high school football candidates donned their moleskins yesterday afternoon, and led by Captain Leslie Stewart, trotted off for the practice grounds, followed by twenty or more on-lookers.

When they reached their destination, they were fortunate to find them and then the squad began saluting, for they knew that once Woodward took hold of the coaching job, even for one night, there would be some score muscled today, following up what might be called a strenuous drill. It was luck that the Marquette star for three seasons, happened to be there, as his intentions were to report to Milwaukee for practice early this week.

Head Coach Curtis was unable to be present and asked his men to get out and perform without him for one day. They did so, and today many of them are whining around that they are suffering from overwork.

Woodworth began by trotting the men around the field in a miniature marathon race, falling on the ball at terrific speed, hard tackling and then some more running was induced in Stewart then picked out a car for and backfield, and they were put into motion for half an hour. Malcolm McDermott was tried at quarter on the second string backfield, which by the way, was under the supervision of Leo Aspinwall, former high school track star and the fastest runner the local institution ever had. Aspinwall has realized much football experience since leaving Janesville some five years ago. He will very likely enter Wisconsin this fall. His help yesterday to the men was appreciated.

RACE BIAS.
The following unsigned letter from some German friend at Edgerton, speaks for itself, and doubtless expresses the sentiment of sympathizers who do not recognize the difference between news and the expression of opinion. The letter follows:

"Dear Sir: I have been reading the Janesville Gazette for four years and found it a good paper. But since the European war started I read the war news and find that Gazette news always reads as the British and enemy so the German is the enemy. So if the German is the enemy you better sell your paper to the British. There are a good many Germans reading the Gazette and they all say the same about it, and I do not care about reading your story entitled 'The Last War' or 'The Last Shot' because they are all British, for the only excuse the British had to get into war was to reduce the German power. There is nothing fair for four or five to pile onto one. Any fair-minded man knows that."

The war news, published day after day in the Gazette is sent out to the press of the country by the American Press association, the most reliable news agency in the country, with special correspondents in all parts of the world.

The news furnished by this association is not an expression of opinion, but simply a plain statement of events as they transpire. Much of this news concerning the war is qualified by the word "reported," because of the strict censorship established, and while the war offices of England and France have given out some official information, the German war office has, and still maintains, the strictest secrecy, and but little can be learned concerning what is happening from German sources.

The Gazette has refrained from the expression of opinion because it is yet too early to judge of responsibility. The suffering people of every nation involved in this most horrible of all wars, demand heartfelt sympathy and this the Gazette has attempted to express.

In discussing newspaper criticism, the Wall Street Journal expresses the sentiment of all fair-minded publishers in the following editorial:

"In common with the overwhelming majority of newspapers in the United States, the Wall Street Journal has been favored with letters with people violently partisan in one way or another. They are anti-German, anti-British, anti-French, even anti-Belgian. But they do not seem to be pro-peace."

New this is exactly what this newspaper has been striving to drive into the heads of all these partisans. It thinks the war was unnecessary at the start, that it was vicious in conception, and ought to be stopped as soon as possible. It is 'anti' a good many things, and it is certainly anti-war.

"Of all uses to which an intelligent, thinking, productive human being can be put, the most foolish is to shoot him. When Professor Ernst Haeckel shows his unquestioned patriotism in collaborating in a letter evidently addressed to the American people, he does not convince us that the Germans have relinquished their weakest obsession—that empire depends upon force."

"No people should know better than they that it depends upon intellect. Germany has succeeded, not because of its great military power, but in spite of it. It has succeeded because it produces the best chemists in the world, perhaps the most industrious people in the world, certainly the most disciplined and orderly minds in the world."

"Recognizing all this, the Wall Street Journal is not pro-German. It is not pro-Slav, or pro-British. It tries, stumbling like any human instrument, to be pro-Christ."

ONE OF THE TRAGEDIES.

The story is told of a woman from California who went to Russia, with her three little children, to visit relatives and was with friends on the Russian frontier when war broke out. There was skirmishing in the neighborhood and one night her brother, with whom she was stopping, failed to come home. The next day she became alarmed, and started with her children for the little town near by. On the way she encountered a company of Russian soldiers entrenched in a ditch, defending themselves against attack. They placed her and the children in the trench for safety and during the night of the children died. She carried the dead baby to the town, near by, to find the place deserted. Kind-hearted soldiers helped her to bury the baby by the roadside, and a few days later another child died. She finally reached the seaport and landed in New York last Saturday, on her way back to her home on the coast.

This is only one of many long chapters of tragedy and suffering which the history of the war will record. It is estimated that the loss of life in the German army has already passed the 100,000 mark, while all the forces engaged have suffered in proportion. This means a multitude of sorrow-stricken homes and a world in mourning—the saddest feature of the war.

It is humiliating to know that the railroads of the country are compelled to go to the president, get dowered with their knuckles and ask for relief. Yet that is exactly what they did, a few days ago. American railroads are confronted with bankruptcy, and unless the government permits them to collect living rates for services rendered, half of them will be in the hands of receivers within a twelve month. It is about time that our public servants at Washington called a halt on persecution. The railroads deserve better treatment.

The primary law of Wisconsin is bad enough, but it isn't a marker compared to the Illinois law, where the ballot at the last election was as large as a circus poster, containing some three thousand names of patriots who aspired to attach themselves to some sort of a payroll. The time limit for voting was three minutes. Talk about the independent voter. That sort of a farce is a burlesque that puts in the shade the Mary Ann feature of the Wisconsin law. The primary law is a monstrosity from every angle.

A late magazine writer calls attention to the fact that in all the published prayers of the crowned heads of Europe that the one thought is expressed in supplication for success of "my army and my people." Not a breath which showed a desire for peace. He also cites the fact that during the dark days of our civil strife our great president, Abraham Lincoln, frequently, through proclamation and petition, recognized the God of nations, and the leading thought was always expressed in a desire for peace.

If the tariff on sugar had been let alone, as it should have been, the beet sugar industry of the United States would have doubled and quadrupled in volume, and America would have led the world as a sugar producing nation. As it is, no one has been benefited, and the country has lost an opportunity which it can not recover.

The Oshkosh Northwestern is throwing a fit over the prospect of a safe and sane administration. The rank and file of the taxpayers have long suffered from a spasm of reform, and are willing to take the chances of the change in sight. Cheer up, brother, the outlook is not so dark as it seems.

The heavy rains of Monday and Monday night suggest the necessity for underground, wire service. The poles which block the gutters and impede the water flow are a menace to property. Basements are flooded because of obstructions, and the city is largely responsible.

PLEASANTLY ENTERTAINS IN HONOR OF BIRTHDAY

Mrs. John Kruse very pleasantly entertained a number of her friends and neighbors at her home on Main street Tuesday, the 16th, the affair being in honor of her birthday. She was the recipient of many useful presents, which shows the high esteem in which she is held. At six o'clock a delicious three course dinner was served, of which all partook most heartily. After dinner social chat and cards were the pastime. Before departing the guests wished the hostess many more such happy events. Those who were present are: Mr. and Mrs. John Kruse, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Robbins, Mrs. John Spaulding, Mrs. Louis Park, Mrs. Mary Davis, Mrs. Charles Schultz, Mrs. Mae Nickle, Mrs. Lena Powell, William Charles, and Mrs. Hattie Pettit and Mrs. Clara Morse, both of Beloit.

ADJOURN ASSAULT CASE UNTIL OCTOBER FIRST

Because of the absence of City Attorney Dougherty, the case of Clayton Moore vs. Policeman William Gower, Fred Bellharz, Jr., and S. W. Hoon was adjourned by Municipal Judge Maxfield this morning until October 1 when it is expected that action will be brought to trial. The charge made by Moore is that the three men assaulted him following trouble at the canning factory which caused his arrest by Officer Gower. Eighteen witnesses were present at the court room, to appear for the plaintiff. Louis Avery appeared to defend Hoon and Bellharz and City Attorney Dougherty will defend Officer Gower. Attorney E. H. Gower is prosecuting the case.

The Universal Deluge.

Scholarship has long ago rejected the ancient Hebrew tradition of a universal deluge. It appears that the tradition occurs in the writings of nearly every people, the old Babylonian story being among the oldest. It was from the Babylonian that the Hebrew scribe got his story—a story that has long since ceased to have any scientific value.

AMONG THE NEWSPAPERS.

What Illinois Says. Good government is the state lies with the women voters. The recent primary demonstrated that the male voter does not care enough for the voting franchise to exercise it. It requires the excitement of a presidential campaign to induce men to vote. They stay away from the poles, thus leaving to an interested few the power to name candidates for public office. The result is bad officials and poor government.

Women desire the ballot and will use it for good purposes. They proved this at the spring elections. They want good government. Clothes worn on with the complete ballot reform will follow that will bring Illinois out of the mire. They will prevent the nomination of the unworthy and will compel the passage of laws that will redound to the credit of the common weal.—Rockford Star.

The Other Side.
The halt of the Germans forward movement in France has filled the press agents of the allies with new enthusiasm. Quiet for a time by the continued success of German arms, the eddy before Paris was the signal for a perfect deluge of falsehood and misrepresentation. And how eagerly the anti-German press of America has gobbled up this cheap and palpably invented interpretation, and played it up in daring headlines as if Germany were practically wiped off the map!

But the journalistic hars have not stopped here. Their hostile imaginations still chafing at the result of their recent repression, they must invent German reverses throughout the whole theater of war.

With a truly magnificent disregard for known facts and impossibilities, they permit Russians and Belgians to win victories on a scale that must make even the British censor blush.—Milwaukee Free Press.

Still Racing.
"Uncle Joe" Cannon is a very old man, but he is some sprinter at that and ran 1,000 votes ahead of his republican opponent for the congressional nomination in the Danville district. However, he may not sprint fast enough this fall to get ahead of his democratic opponent who beat him to the wire two years ago.—Freeport Standard.

True at That.
People who regard wars as always necessary are in the same class with the mothers who used to think that every child had to have the measles, the mumps and the whooping cough.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Always the Case.
Austria started the war and will be the first to quit.—Chicago News.

THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY
Eleventh Episode. Tomorrow.
"In the Path of the Fast Express"
MAJESTIC AND LYRIC

Below is the story of the tenth episode, shown last Thursday, printed for the benefit of those whom the rain kept away.

While a hundred false clues lure Norton and Jones on as many wild goose chases in quest of the missing girl and while Braine and the other conspirators, certain that she has gone to her death in the midst of the grim Atlantic, devise new schemes to get a trace of the vanished treasure, Florence, herself bereft of speech and memory, is cared for by the kindly folk of the tiny fisher-village, whither her rescuers have brought her. By every method known to their simple minds they seek to learn the mystery of her identity but without avail. Days and weeks pass, but although she rapidly regains her strength, Florence gives no sign that she recalls anything of her past. Then it happens that Jackson, one of Braine's lieutenants in search of recreation comes to the village. Fate throws him across Florence's path, he recognizes her, and at once apprises Braine of her whereabouts. Thereafter, events begin to take place with startling suddenness. Braine and the Countess Olga, already at their wits' end to locate the whereabouts of the Hargreaves' fortune, at once take counsel, and it is arranged that Braine, who has been informed of Florence's condition, shall go at once to the fisher-village.

In the meantime Norton and Jones have not been idle. Jones has set off on a false scent, while Norton remains to keep a watch on the conspirators, whom he is sure are holding Florence in their power. Discovering that he is dogging their footsteps, two of the gang lay a clever trap for the reporter. As it makes every effort to conceal their movements, they lead Norton by a roundabout route to a house on the water side, where an artfully concealed trapdoor leads to a vault into which the river enters at high tide. Seeing the men enter this house, after a short delay Norton forces his way in also, sure that he has located Florence's prison at last. An instant later, the trap is sprung and he is precipitated into the noisome pit below.

When the conspirators find that he still breathes, they form a sudden plan, which promises to eliminate him from interference with their schemes quite as effectually as would his death. The plan is nothing less than to "drown" him. Within the hour he is dragged aboard a vessel leaving for a three-year cruise in Northern waters, and, with the aches and pangs of returning consciousness, he is put to work at the various rough tasks, which are part of a seaman's life aboard a whaler.

Meanwhile Braine arrives at the fisher village, and after some days of reconnaissance, learns all that the simple folk know of Florence's rescue and her ensuing history. Disguised as an old man he poses as her father and attempts to get possession of the girl, but something about him—some recollection hidden away in the misty depths of Florence's mind—causes her to show a fear of her pseudo parent, which makes the old fisherman at whose home she is living, suspect that Braine is not what he claims to be. He is driven from the house and for a time his plans are frustrated.

But Braine is not to be foiled so easily. He engages a fast motor yacht, and, when his opportunity comes, seizes Florence at a time she is alone on the beach. In spite of her desperate struggle he carries her aboard this boat and makes off. The seizure is seen by the old fisherman, who vainly gives chase, but too late to save the girl from her fate, and soon the yacht is a mere speck upon the horizon.

Many miles have been put behind the speeding boat, when a sudden rush of smoke from the vessel's hold gives warning of a new danger. Flames burst out of the cabin and soon drive all hands over the side. Fortunately a sailing vessel sees their plight and Braine and Florence are taken aboard. Braine, who is still in disguise, by promising a large sum of money to the captain, arranges to be put ashore with Florence at the nearest port.

Because of her pitiful condition Florence is allowed the freedom of the deck. She does not observe the intent gaze of a sailor, who has eagerly watched her every movement since her arrival on board, nor does she see him follow her to a sequestered part of the deck. Suddenly she hears her name spoken in a voice, which she knows well. It is only a whispered word, but a new light—the light of returning understanding—leaps into her eyes.

"Jimmy—dear Jimmy!" she gasps, and the next minute she is held close in that young man's arms. In a flash her reason returns to her, and with it a realization of her imminent danger. She nestles closer in her lover's embrace, all her doubts gone. As for the "drowned" Jimmy, who has already pierced Braine's disguise and heard his arrangements with the captain, it does not take him long to evolve a plan, which will release them both from their difficulties.

The next morning, when the vessel arrives at the port, where it has been agreed to land them, strange to say, there is no sign of Norton. As Florence and her pseudo father, after paying over the stipulated sum to the captain, climb down the ship's side to the waiting boat, the reporter is nowhere to be seen.

His absence is readily explained, however, as soon as Florence and her companion are out of sight of the sailors, who bring them ashore. With a swift and dexterous twist of his hand, her escort tears off the wig, whiskers and goggles, that have thus far concealed his identity and discloses—not Braine, but the missing Norton.

And Braine, bound and gagged and stripped to his shirt, and outward bound, rages vainly in his cabin.

Question of Height.
Lady Southwark, in her recently published reminiscences, tells a story of an Irishman who was cutting turf near a bog when a friend came up to him, crying: "Patrick is stuck in the bog up to his ankles." "Don't worry, then," was the reply; "if he's only up to his ankles he can soon get out again!" "Yes, but he went in head first!" retorted the other.—Pearson's Weekly.

Sweet Grass.
We never know how much sweet need there is in grass till it is cut. Severed from the root, it gives out a perfume which the garden itself can hardly rival. Misfortune instead of making us bitter, should bring out the sweetness of the spirit, like the fragrance of the mown grass.

The Last Shot

"Yes, exactly! Yes, you have it!" "Perhaps," he said.

"You would not like to see thousands, hundreds of thousands, of men killed and maimed, would you?" she demanded, and her eyes held the horror of the sight in reality. "You can prevent it—you can!" Her heart was in the appeal.

"The old argument! No, I should not like to see that," he replied. "I only do my duty as a soldier to my country."

"The old answer! The more reason why you should tell the premier you can't! But there is still another reason for telling him," she urged gently.

Now he saw her not at twenty-seven but at seventeen, girlish, the subject of no processes of reason but in the spell of an intuition, and he knew that something out of the blue in a flash, was coming.

"For you will not win!" she declared. This struck fire. Square jaw and sturdy body, in masculine energy, resolute and trained, were set indomitably against feminine vitality.

"Yes, we shall win! We shall win!" he said without even the physical demonstration of a gesture and in a hard, even voice which was like that of the machinery of modern war. Itself, a voice which the aristocratic snuff, the Louis XVI curls, or any of the old gallery-display heroes would have thought utterly lacking in histrionics suitable to the occasion. He remained rigid after he had spoken, handsome, self-possessed.

There was no use of beating feminine fists against such a stone wall. The force of the male was supreme. She smiled with a strange, quivering loosening of the lips. She spread out her hands with fingers apart, as if to let something run free from them into the air, and the flame of appeal that had been in her eyes broke into many lights that seemed to scatter into space, yet ready to return at her command. She glanced at the clock and rose, almost abruptly.

"I was very strenuous riding my hobby against yours, wasn't I?" she exclaimed in a flutter of distraction that made it easy for him to descend from his own steed. "I stated a feeling. I made a guess, a threat about your nation—and all in the air. That's a woman's privilege; one man grant, isn't it?"

"We enjoy doing so," he replied, all urbanity.

"Thank you!" she said simply. "I must be at home in time for the children's lesson on Sunday. My sleeper is engaged, and if I am not to miss the train I must go immediately."

With an undeniable shock of regret he realized that the interview was over. Really, he had had a very good time; not only that, but—

"Will it be ten years before we meet again?" he asked.

"Perhaps, unless you change the rules about officers crossing the frontier to take tea," she replied.

"Even if I did, the vice-chief of staff might hardly go."

"Then perhaps you must wait," she warned him, "until the teachers of peace have done away with all frontiers."

"Or, if there were war, I should come!" he answered in kind. He half wished that this might start another argument and she would miss her train. But she made no reply. "And you may come to the Gray capital again. You are not through traveling!" he added.

This aroused her afresh; the flame was back in her eyes.

"Yes, I have all the memories of my journeys to enjoy, all their lessons to study," she said. "There is the big world, and you want to have had the breath of all its climates in your lungs, the visions of all its peoples yours. Then the other thing is three acres and a cow. If you could only have the solidarity of the Japanese, their public spirit, with the old Chinese love of family and peace, and a cathedral near-by on a hill. Patriotism? Why, it is in the son of your three acres. I love to feel the warm, rich earth of our own garden in my hands! Hereafter I shall be a stay-at-home; and if my children win," she held out her hand in parting with the same frank, earnest grip of her greeting, "why, you will find that tea is, as usual, at four-thirty."

He had found the women of his high official world—a narrower world than he realized—much alike. Striking certain keys, certain chords responded. He could probe the depths of their minds, he thought, in a single evening. Then he passed on, unless it was in the interest of pleasure or of his career to linger. This meeting had left his curiosity baffled. He understood how Marta's vitality demanded action, which exerted itself in a feminine way for a feminine cause. The cure for such a fad was most clear to his masculine perception. What if all the power she had shown in her appeal for peace could be made to serve another ambition? He knew that he was a great man. More than once he had wondered what would happen if he were to meet a great woman. And he should not see Marta Galland again unless war came.

CHAPTER IV.

Times Have Changed.

The 53d of the Browns had started for La Tir on the same day that the 128th of the Grays had started for South La Tir. While the 128th was going to new scenes, the 53d was returning to familiar ground. It had been trained in the capital of the province from which its ranks had been recruited. After a steep incline, there was a welcome bugle note and with shouts of delight the centipede's legs broke apart! Bankers, laborers, doctors, valets, butchers, manufacturers and judges' sons threw themselves down on the grassward of the embankment to rest. With their talk of home, of relatives whom they had met at the station, and of the changes in the town was mingled talk of the crisis.

Meanwhile, an aged man was approaching. At times he would break into a kind of trot that ended, after a few steps, in shortness of breath. He was quite withered, his bright eyes twinkling out of an area of moth patches, and he wore a frayed uniform coat with a medal on the breast.

"Is this the 53d?" he quavered to the nearest soldier.

"It certainly is!" some one answered. "Come and join us, veteran!"

"Is Tom—Tom Frugal here?"

The answer came from a big soldier, who sprang to his feet and leaped toward the old man.

"It's grandfather, as I live!" he called out, kissing the veteran on both cheeks. "I saw sister in town, and she said you'd be at the gate as we marched by."

"Didn't wait at no gate! Marched right up to you!" said grandfather. "Marched up with my uniform and medal on! Stand off there, Tom, so I can see you. My word! You're bigger'n your father, but not bigger'n I was! No, sir, not bigger'n I was in my day before that wound sort of bent me over. They say it's the lead in the blood. I've still got the bullet!"

The old man's trousers were threadbare but well darned, and the holes in the uppers of his shoes were carefully patched. He had a merry air of optimism, which his grandson had inherited.

"Well, Tom, how much longer you got to serve?" asked grandfather.

"Six months," answered Tom.

"One, two, three, four—grandfather counted the numbers off on his fingers. "That's good. You'll be in time for the spring ploughing. My, how you have filled out! But, somehow, I can't get used to this kind of uniform. Why, I don't see how a girl'd be attracted to you fellows, at all!"

"They have to, for we're the only kind of soldiers there are nowadays. Not as gay as in your day, that's sure, when you were in the Hussars, eh?"

"Yes, I was in the Hussars—in the Hussars! I tell you with our sabres gleaming, our horses' bits a-jingling, our pennons a-flying, and all the color of our uniform—I tell you, the girls used to open their eyes at us. And we went into the charge like that—yes, sir, just that gay and grand. Colonel Galland leading!"

Military history said that it had been a rather foolish charge, a fine example of the vainglory of unreasoning bravery that accomplishes nothing, but no one would suggest such skepticism of an immortal event in popular imagination in hearing of the old man as he lived over that intoxicated rush of horses and men into a battery of the Grays.

"Well, didn't you find what I said was true about the lowlanders?" asked grandfather after he had finished the charge, referring to the people of the southern frontier of the Browns, where the 53d had just been garrisoned.

"No, I kind of liked them. I made a lot of friends," admitted Tom. "They're very progressive."

"Eh, eh? You're joking!" To like the people of the southern frontier was only less conceivable than liking the people of the Grays. "That's because you didn't see deep under them. They're all on the outside—a tight lot! Why, if they'd done their part in that last war we'd have liked the Grays until they cried for mercy! If their army corps had stood its ground at Volmer—"

"So you've always said," interrupted Tom.

"And the way they cook tripe! I couldn't stomach it, could you? And if there's anything I am partial to it's a good dish of tripe! And their light beer—like drinking froth! And their bread—why, it ain't bread! It's chips! Talent fit for civilized folks!"

"But I sort of got used to their ways," said Tom.

"Eh, eh?" Grandfather looked at grandson quizzically, seeking the cause of such heterodoxy in a northern man.

"Say, you ain't been falling in love?" he hazarded. "You ain't going to bring one of them southern girls home?"

"No!" said Tom, laughing.

"Well, I'm glad you ain't, for they're naturally light-minded. I remember 'em well." He wandered on with his questions and comments. "Is it a fact, Tom, or was you just joking when you wrote home that the soldiers took so many baths?"

"Yes, they do."

"Well, that beats me! It's a wonder you didn't all die of pneumonia!" He paused to absorb the phenomenon. Then his half-childish mind, prompted by a random recollection, flitted to another subject which set him to giggling. "And the little crawlers—did they bother you much, the little crawlers?"

"The little crawlers?" repeated Tom, mystified.

"Yes. Everybody used to get 'em just from living close together. Had to comb 'em out and pick 'em out of your clothes. The chase we used to call it."

So Firmin carried the beer.

As they walked up—it was the king who made the pace rather than Firmin—they talked of the conference before them, and Firmin, with a certain want of assurance that would have surprised him in himself in the days of his professorship, sought to define the policy of his companion. "In its broader form, sir," said Firmin, "I admit a certain plausibility in this project of Leblanc's, but I feel that although it may be advisable to set up some sort of general control of international affairs—a sort of Hague court with extended powers—that is no reason whatever for losing sight of the principles of national and imperial autonomy."

"Firmin," said the king, "I am going to set my brother kings a good example."

Firmin intimated a curiosity that veiled a dread.

"By chucking all that nonsense," said the king.

He quickened his pace as Firmin, who was already a little out of breath, betrayed a disposition to reply.

"I am going to chuck all that nonsense," said the king as Firmin prepared to speak. "I am going to fling my royalty and empire on the table and declare at once I don't mean to haggle. It's haggling—about rights—has been the devil in human affairs, for—always. I am going to stop this nonsense."

Firmin halted abruptly. "But, sir?" he cried.

The king stopped six yards ahead of him and looked back at his adviser's perspiring visage.

"Do you really think, Firmin, that I am here—as an infernal politician—to put my crown and my flag and my claims and so forth in the way of peace? That little Frenchman is right. You know he is right as well as I do. Those things are over. We—we kings and rulers and representatives have been at the very heart of the mischief. Of course we imply separation, and of course separation means the threat of war, and of course the threat of war means the accumulation of more and more atomic bombs. The old game's up. But, I say, we mustn't stand here, you know. The world waits. Don't you think the old game's up, Firmin?"

Firmin adjusted a strap, passed a hand over his wet forehead and followed earnestly. "I admit, sir," he said to a receding back, "that there has to be some sort of hegemony, some sort of Amphictyonic council!"

"There's got to be one simple government for all the world," said the king over his shoulder.

"But as for a reckless, unqualified abandonment, sir—"

"Bang!" cried the king.

Firmin made no answer to this interruption. But a faint shadow of annoyance passed across his heated features.

"Yesterday," said the king by way of explanation, "the Japanese very nearly got San Francisco."

"I hadn't heard, sir."

"The Americans ran the Japanese aeroplane down into the sea, and there the bomb got busted."

"Under the sea, sir?"

"Yes. Submarine volcano. The steam is in sight of the Californian coast. It was as near as that, and with things like this happening you want me to go up this hill and haggle. Consider the effect of that upon my imperial cousin—and all the others."

"He will haggle, sir."

"Not a bit of it," said the king.

"Leblanc won't let him."

Firmin halted abruptly and gave a vicious pull at the offending strap. "Sir, he will listen to his advisers," he said in a tone that in some subtle way seemed to implicate his master with the trouble of the knapsack.

The king considered him. "We will go just a little higher," he said. "I want to find this unoccupied village they spoke of, and then we will drink that beer. It can't be far. We will drink the beer and throw away the bottles. And then, Firmin, I shall ask you to look at things in a more generous light because, you know, you must."

He turned about, and for some time the only sound they made was the noise of their boots upon the loose stones of the way and the irregular breathing of Firmin.

CHAPTER VIII.

The World Republic.

At length, as it seemed to Firmin, or quite soon, as it seemed to the king, the gradient of the path diminished, the way widened out, and they found themselves in a very beautiful place indeed. It was one of those upland clusters of sheds and houses that are still to be found in the mountains of north Italy that were used only in the high summer and which it was the custom to leave locked up and deserted through all the winter and spring and up to the middle of June. The buildings were of a sort toned gray stone buried in rich green grass, shadowed by chestnut trees and lit by an extraordinary blaze of yellow broom. Never had the king seen broom so glorious. He shouted at the light of it, for it seemed to give out more sunlight even than it received. He sat down impulsively on a lichenous stone, tugged out his bread and cheese and bade Firmin thrust the beer into the shaded weeds to cool.

"The things people miss, Firmin," he said, "who go up into the air in ships!"

Firmin looked around him with an ungainly eye. "You see it at its best, sir," he said, "before the peasants come here again and make it filthy."

"It would be beautiful anyhow," said the king.

"Superficially, sir," said Firmin. "But it stands for a social order that is fast vanishing away. Indeed, judging by the grass between the stones and in the huts, I am inclined to doubt if it is in use even now."

"I suppose," said the king, "they would come up immediately the hay on this flower meadow is cut. It would be those slow, creamy colored beasts, I expect, one sees on the roads below and swartly girls with red handkerchiefs over their black hair. It is wonderful to think how long that beautiful old life lasted. In the Roman times and long ages before ever the rumor of the Romans had come into these parts, men drove their cattle up into these places as the summer came on. How haunted is this place! There have been quarrels here, hopes, children have played here and lived to be old crones and old gaffers and died, and so it has gone on for thousands of lives. Lovers, innumerable lovers, have caressed amidst this golden broom."

He meditated over a busy mouthful of bread and cheese.

"We ought to have brought a tankard for that beer," he said.

Firmin produced a folding aluminum cup, and the king was pleased to drink.

"I wish, sir," said Firmin suddenly, "I could induce you at least to delay your decision."

"It's no good talking, Firmin," said the king. "My mind's as clear as daylight."

"Sir," protested Firmin, with his voice full of bread and cheese and genuine emotion, "have you no respect for your kingship?"

The king paused before he answered with unwonted gravity. "It's just because I have, Firmin, that I won't be a puppet in this game of international politics." He regarded his companion for a moment and then remarked: "Kingship! What do you know of kingship, Firmin?"

"Yes," cried the king to his astonished counselor. "For the first time in my life I am going to be a king. I am going to lead, and lead by my own authority. For a dozen generations my family has been a set of dummies in the hands of their advisers. Now I am going to be a real king, and I am going to abolish, dispose of, finish, the crown to which I have been a slave. But what a world of paralyzing shame this roaring stuff has ended! The rigid old world is in the melting pot again, and I who seemed to be no more than the stuffing inside a royal robe, I am a king among kings. I have to play my part at the head of things and put an end to blood and fire and idiot disorder."

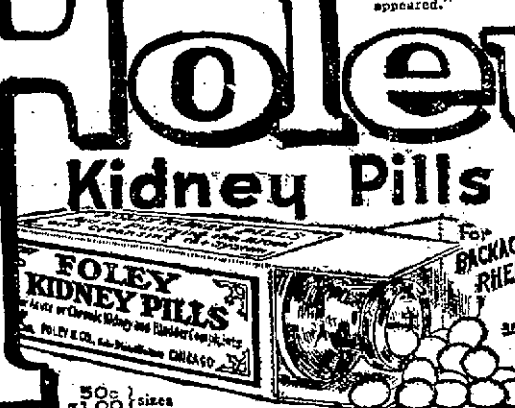

"But, sir," protested Firmin. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

OVER 6,000 PUPILS IN COUNTY SCHOOLS

Report of County Superintendent of Education for Year Has Interesting Figures.

According to the annual report of County Superintendent of Schools, O. T. Antedel, 6,438 children last year attended the educational institutions of Rock county, exclusive of the number enrolled in the schools of the larger cities and villages which were under county supervision. There are 173 school districts in the county, with a total of 133 different departments.

The census for the county is appended:

Avon, 192; Beloit, 259; Bradford, 280; Center, 224; Clinton, 282; Fulton, 217; Harmony, 344; Janesville, 305; Johnsonville, La Prairie, 237; Lima, 206; Magnolia, 48; Milton, 222; Newark, 231; Plymouth, 270; Porter, 218; Rock, 283; Spring Valley, 268; Turtle, 338; Union, 275; Clinton village, 15; Orfordville village, 129; Milton village, 148; total, 6,488.

According to the report which goes to State Superintendent of County School Caxey at Madison, a total of $79,120.25 was paid out to country teachers. Of this women instructors received $74,123.35 and men teachers $5,000.90. For the teacher's pension fund $665.25 was deducted from the aggregate amount paid teachers. For the transportation of students who live long distances from school, $450 was expended. The school population includes persons only between the ages of four and twenty years.

Comparison with last year's records shows a substantial gain in school population, which is also indicative of the entire census growth of Rock county.

WORKINGS OF TARIFF ARE UPSET BY WAR

Foreign Trade of United States At a Standstill Means Serious Condition.

(By Winfield Jones.)

Washington, D. C., Sept. 15.—The European war has largely nullified, for the time being, the new tariff law. Imports are not now governed so much by custom houses as by international shipping conditions. Blockaded harbors in Europe and millions of men engaged as warriors instead of producers. In the same way our exports have been under the embargo. From the foreign trade which is possible under the conditions of war nobody can undertake to draw conclusions as to the workings of the tariff law at the present time. But it is worth while to look at the workings of the democratic tariff in the month preceding the outbreak of the war. In July there was still peace in Europe; but in July our new tariff was still invading this country with overwhelming imports and was still ravaging our foreign balance of trade.

As compared with July a year ago our exports decreased nearly $7,000,000, but our imports increased more than $21,000,000.

In July, 1913, we had a balance of trade in our favor of $21,929,000. In July of this year it had turned into a balance against us of $6,095,900.

For the four months of April, May, June and July we had a balance against us of $20,507,870.

For the seven months of the calendar year our exports decreased nearly $25,000,000, but our imports increased from $1,013,822 to $24,738,738.

For the first seven months of 1913, our exports were $307,930,168. For the first seven months of 1914, under the new tariff, the balance in our favor fell to $59,625,109.

It is to be admitted in fairness that the huge balance of nearly $308,000,000 in our favor for the first seven months of 1913 was abnormal. But for the same period in 1912 it was more than $215,000,000, and for 1911 nearly $234,000,000.

There is no reasonable doubt that if the war had not come to cut off millions of imports the tariff would have wiped out completely our favorable balance on foreign trade in a very few months, and we should have been shipping gold to Europe to settle our trade account.

It is true that the tariff as we had it would have shipped gold to Europe only a few days ago to pay for the enormous quantities of American securities which were dumped upon our market by all Europe on the day of the revolution of 1916 will be based on facts. A man needs no theory to tell him when his investments are bringing no income, nor to interpret the envelope that brings his money to close. The conditions of today did not exist in 1912, when the republican party was in power, and the country is full of men who realize that fact.

Nothing has happened in the meantime to make a change but the change in national administration.

At the close of the last presidential campaign the democratic party announced that the tariff question was settled, that the country had decided firmly and finally to put aside the republican doctrine of protection and substitute for it the democratic theory of revenue only. But the working out of that policy has proved that such a policy is one of revenue for the foreign manufacturer only, and with that the nation is not satisfied.

Instead of being settled, the tariff question will again be the issue in 1916.

All over again will be tried out the issue of whether a man or a nation having a legitimate and proper advantage shall sacrifice in deference to a Wilson theory; whether men who have income and employment shall surrender them on the ground that some imaginary better thing will take their place.

On The Spur of The Moment

The Extras.

The first thing in the morning I buy an extra paper and read the heads and tads. And learn some new war caper. I read it in a minute.

Then telephone to mother. The war news that is in it—And then I buy another.

I study situations. Until my brain is muddled. There are so many nations that I become befuddled.

I don't know which is better. Or what they're fighting for—But still I buy another.

And load up on more war.

Still extras come aplenty. I read and try to think. In one day I buy twenty—My mind is on the blink.

I can't tend to my knitting. I swear to cut them out. I dream of airships fitting. And hordes prepared to fight.

I hear the cannon rumble—T I hear the hoarse command; I'm mixed up in the jumble. Upon some foreign land.

I hear the wagons squeaking. I hear the battle yell—I hear the missiles striking, I hear the shot and shell.

A hundred times I've battled Each night or thereabout; Those extras have me rattled— I swear to cut them out.

But, first thing in the morning, I go on buying papers—I read the heads adorning And learn more new war capers.

From the Hickeyville Clarion. Hank Lucas has received a letter from his son Willie, who is at Kibosh college taking a course in broad jumping and hammer throwing.

Willie says he is going into football and will play on the right end. Hank says he is glad of that, for from what he has observed a good many of our players on the wrong end and land on their heads.

Grandma Perkins has been barred out of a polite society in our town because she smokes a pipe, but she says, by gravity, she may smoke a pipe, but she ain't never kissed a noble dog yet.

Miss Daphenia Perkins, our poetess of passion, has wrote a great poem which she expects to get published in the 35-cent magazines before she dies. We know it is a great poem because nobody kin tell what it is about.

Ame Hilliker has lived in this town forty years and ain't never rode on a railroad train or seen "Sis Hopkins."

It don't never pay to make fun of anybody's religion or criticize the way a feller has his hair cut. A feller's religion and his hair is two subjects that is very close to him.

An Occupation Gone. Say, what has become of the old-fashioned glint.

Who used to loaf 'round the old-fashioned store? Whose brilliance made all of his liars blink.

When he told of battles in wartime of yore?

At present he isn't quite up to the job As "expert" in war for that eastern affair.

Has certainly with all the theories of modern hob.

And all of the "experts" are up in the air.

Signs of the Times. All is not well with Mr. Farnham, the matinee idol, escaped from Europe to America.

Europeans are finding out that singing of war anthems does not win battles.

One thing that will never be settled is the question as to who really is the oldest Odd Fellow in America.

Mexican died in a bathtub the other day, but there is little danger of this becoming a general thing.

It is left for some thousand wags to announce that the Belgians have taken Peruana.

Somewh. Aigue. "Twobble prides himself on calling a spade a spade." "Quite so, but what makes his conversation offensive is the fact that he doesn't confine himself to spades."

Portable Wireless Outfits Play Important Part In Field Work

Berlin, Sept. 16.—Portable wireless telegraph outfits have proved a boon to the German armies in the field. These outfits have eliminated the old field telegraph systems, which were so tedious to lay and which, when strung through a hostile country, were so easily cut and put out of commission. Only along permanently established lines of communication are the lines laid for telegraphic and telephonic purposes.

In other countries the armies have not solved the problem of portable wireless equipments. They are still cumbersome and far from easily handled. They also do not always give the service needed, and are easily put out of commission.

The short range equipments carried by the German field forces can be transported by a motorcycleist 200 miles a day. Long range equipment can be carried by a man and a horse. The short range equipments will send and receive over an average of thirty-five miles, where the country is not hilly. Larger sizes carry a distance of 180 miles unless the topography of the country interferes.

The instruments can be set up and ready for transmission of messages within fifteen minutes of their arrival at any point. They can be taken down and made ready for transportation in from eight to ten minutes.

Return to the matter of transporting the equipment it might be added that in country where neither horse or motor propelled vehicle can travel it is carried by a man on specially constructed bamboo "stretchers."

The regular "wireless crew" consists of seven men and two officers. Two look after the horses, five are employed in setting up the equipment and in dismantling it, and the two officers send and receive messages.

The mast is of aluminum alloy and is built in eight sections each six feet long, provided with slip joints. The mast first is joined together on the ground, the guy ropes are attached, and the whole raised. The lower joint is formed of a socket bedded in bitumen, which in turn is encased in a metal tube provided with a pointed shoe.

If the ground is too rocky to permit of easy insertion, these members of the crew who are not generating electricity or sending out the mast in position by means of guy ropes.

The aerial is very ingeniously devised. It consists of a number of bronze wire conductors radiating out like the ribs of an inverted umbrella. The mast first is joined together on the ground, the guy ropes are attached, and the whole raised. The lower joint is formed of a socket bedded in bitumen, which in turn is encased in a metal tube provided with a pointed shoe.

For sending purposes, the batteries of a special make are supposed to be used, but in case these are not available a small dynamo, coupled to a pedaling arrangement, forms part of the outfit.

With this a man can easily drive the generator at a speed of 1,300 to 1,400 revolutions per minute, and so provide a current of one ampere at 50 volts, which is amply sufficient for sending purposes.

The weight of dynamo and pedal drive is 95 pounds and it is so arranged that it can be carried by one man by means of straps, which fasten across the shoulders.

The transmitter and receiver, the latter of which is of the well-known "head-dress" pattern, are designed so as to be as light as possible, and it might be considered that a certain amount of efficiency has been sacrificed to obtain increased portability and ease in erecting.

It is interesting to note that the wave length of about 364 metres, with a coupling of 8 per cent unvariable, and the equipment can exclude waves of 5 per cent variation.

The sending can be carried on with great rapidity and the transmitting and receiving apparatus, without the mast aerial, weigh only eighty-five pounds.
